

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method and device for delivering high speed telecommunications services in existing network interface devices comprises a network interface unit block or module, with an associated removable customer access module, which can be mounted in an existing slot cavity of an existing network interface device to terminate DSL or T1 service, or "pass-thru" T1 service, so as to provide both traditional residential service and high-speed digital service to a customer.

0983103-01301
T02T00-020T0000